

Some have called him an “R&B version of George Jones,” while others have called him a “Country Otis Redding.” Whichever description you feel fits him best, there is no doubting the fact that when you hear the music of T. Graham Brown, you are hearing something that is very special. Music is all the singer has ever known, and it shows in such radio staples as “I Tell It Like It Used To Be,” “Don’t Go To Strangers,” Hell & High Water and “Darlene.”

T. was born in Atlanta, Georgia. In the 1970’s he fronted his bands, T. Graham Brown & REO Diamond and T. Graham Brown’s Rack Of Spam. He married his wife Sheila in 1980, and with her love and support, the singer soon found his way to Music City.

Brown first found work singing advertising jingles for McDonalds, Taco Bell, Kentucky Fried Chicken, Almond Joy, Coca-Cola, Dr. Pepper, Budweiser, Disneyland, Ford, Dodge, and dozens of other products. His soulful talents soon found their way to EMI Music Publishing, where he was signed as a songwriter. Shortly thereafter, he signed with Capitol Records where he started a long and successful recording career that continues to this day

Never one to limit his musical tastes to one certain style, T. Graham Brown has carved out a career that has included success in Country, and Gospel achieving number ones in each genre.

Also, he has appeared on the stage of the iconic Grand Ole Opry over 200 times. Brown continues to write, produce, record and perform all over the U.S.A. and around the world. As he says “I’ve got a band and a bus and I’m taking the music to the people.
